CHURCH OF CHRIST NOTES.

Regular services next Sunday as usual. Bible school at 9:45 prompt. I find interest is manifested in all departments of the school. Come and enjoy it.

Preaching at eleven o'clock. Subject for the morning sermon, "Joy Cometh in the Morning."

In the evening at the Crystal, there will be a series of pictures shown as usual, and the regular lecture of the evening. Subject for the evening lecture, The Preacher and his Job.

We desire at this time to speak a foreword concerning the services on May the 9th. This is the world's "Mothers Day," and the day will be fully observed by us. In the morning at the church there will be a special service for mothers, old folks and those who can not attend church because of inability to walk there. Autos will be furnished for those unable to reach the church and you will be given a bouquet and after services taken by autos to your homes again. We hope to make this a day long to be remembered by many. Will you not please notify the pastors of all the shut-ins who may desire to go, that ample arrangements may be made for them.

The ladies of the church will give a bazaar and bakery sale on next Saturday at the home of Mrs. B. T. Davis. All are invited to attend.

YOU AND JIM.

Only a storekeeper—that's all. Down street—yes, in your own town.

Plain sort of a fellow, him—not much of a merchant, no. Decent chap, though, and honest.

When you drop into his store, it's like him, plain.

He calls you "Bill," you call him "Jim;" home folks, you know.

He asks you how the children are, and wife; he knows them, too.

He shows you what you want to buy, he tells you if it's good or bad—and names the price.

"Just charge it, Jim," you say, "I'm a little short right now."

"All right, Bill," he says, and wraps it up.

He pays his taxes here; he chips in all he can to help along the fire department and police, the schools and churches.

He sits in lodge with you; he calls around when you are sick.

He hires his home folks to clerk and keep his books; he buys his groceries, meat and clothes, the little furniture at home of neighbor merchants.

"Isn't much, but what it is, your town gets all the benefit."

Your bill comes due and still you're short of ready cash: "I'll have to stand you off awhile," you say.

"All right, Bill," says he, "I know you'll pay me when you can," and neither growls nor grumbles.

Pretty decent sort of chap, isn't he?

You know it!

But what about the catalog you keep at home and study nights and Sundays?

You read the side-show line of talk about the stuff it lists.

Yes, and when you have the coin, maybe, you make an order for some things you think you've got to have and with the order send the dough; and buy it sight unseen.

In time the shipment comes—you'd hate to have Jim know. "Course it's none of his business, but then, he might feel hurt because you haven't paid him what you owe."

Somehow the plunder that you get don't seem so wonderful as the story of it read; in fact it isn't what you thought it was.

And if you're stung, as others often are, you don't put up a holler and ask your money back. Nary!

You read the line of talk again, and find the chap who wrote it was darn sight smoother than you thought; he worded his description with such clever skill that you, yourself, filled in his artful gaps and now you're stung, you'd a leetle rather no one'd ever find it out.

But Jim, Oh, that's another matter, quite. If accidentally you happen to forget to warm the axe you bought of him, before you chop, and bust a clean cut semi-circle from its edge; or if the cook stove Mandy bought of Jim don't somehow suit her notion 'bout the way it bakes or draws; or if the barrel churn he sold you slacks because the girls forget to keep a little water in it.

Why, you go right back to Jim and if he doesn't hustle a round and smile and hand you out another axe, no charge, or send a man to see the stove and clean your soot-clogged chimney out, or tighten up your churn—by thunder, you cut loose and rip him up the back and down again;—that's different.

Yep!

Poor old Jim!

Only a storekeeper—that's all.

"He can't compete with mail order folks," you say; he don't know how to buy; he hasn't the outlet; his prices are too high.

Listen!

If he can't compete, the fault is yours as much as his.

You measure by a double standard. You finger over his stock, you blow your breath on his razor blades, you get his guarantee, and then you stand him off and let him sweat until you're good and ready to pay—while to the stranger who neither knows you nor cares a tinker's cuss about you, you must pay before you see or get the goods.

You make Jim earn the slender profit that he makes on you; you make him be your banker when you're short of funds; you squeeze poor Jim and jew him down and strain the truth to beat the band; you strew his path with thorns and rocks.

And if your neighbors do like you and send their ready cash a way to swell the sales of those who never help your town or you, some day, not very far away, poor Jim will reach the point where he can't longer hold the bag and when he closes up or moves away, there's one more vacant business room in town.

And real estate is on the bum—your town grows backwards; somehow taxes keep a climbing up, but stores are fewer, business worse and worse each year. The schools are getting punk, you've got to send your children to the city for a decent education—and for that you pay cash.

Why?

Think it over.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT.

Whereas, it has pleased Almighty God in His wise Providence to call from labor to reward Lt. Gen. H. A. Tyler, of Oakwood Farm, this county,

And whereas General Tyler was so liberal and generous to the poor and needy of both white and colored people in furnishing them labor and paying for the same, he put sunshine in many homes. And in his philanthropic work he remembered schools and churches. Therefore be it

Resolved, that we, the members of Pleasant Hill Baptist church do bow in humble submission to that God who doeth all things well.

Resolved further that our sympathy and prayer is that his son may be restored to health and that he may live a long and useful life like his illustrious father.
